MY OLD DIFFUSER WORKED...
ONLY WHEN I WAS NEXT TO IT.

IMAGE DIRECTION

Wide open-plan living room, warm golden light. Diffuser plugged in on the far side of the frame, small in the scene, bottle of Crisp Citrus Scape beside it. A soft ribbon of scent drifts across the room toward camera. In the foreground, a woman on her couch, far from the device, eyes closed, mid-inhale. The distance is the ad.

I SWORE I'D NEVER BUY ANOTHER DIFFUSER

Split frame down the middle. Left: old moldy diffuser, water stains, buildup, dim flat light. Right: the Maison Croyez diffuser with a bottle of Honey Nectar, clean counter, warm golden light. Same counter height both sides.

Fallback: if the split renders as two mismatched photos, use one continuous counter — moldy unit left, ours right, same light.

Render note: the label must be blurred illegible fine print — not real words.
